IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

In the Matter of:

Logan T. Johnston,
Debtor.

Logan T. Johnston III,
Appellant,

vs.

Paula Parker, et al.,
Appellees.

No. CIV-03-1735-PHX-ROS
BK. Case No. 01-06221-SSC
Adversary No. 01-00885-SSC

AMENDED ORDER

This Amended Order corrects typographical errors in the Court's previous Order entered on September 30, 2004. Appellant Logan T. Johnston III, a Chapter 11 debtor, filed an adversary proceeding pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(h) against his former wife and her lawyer alleging that they had prosecuted contempt proceedings in state court in willful violation of the Bankruptcy Code's automatic stay. After Johnston presented his case at trial, the Appellees made an oral motion for a directed verdict. The bankruptcy court granted the motion in a written decision, finding no liability on the part of the Appellees as a matter of

1 law. The Court affirms in part, reverses in part, and remands for proceedings consistent with 2 this opinion.¹

3 BACKGROUND

4 In 1993, Appellant Logan T. Johnston III ("Johnston") filed for divorce from Appellee
5 Paula Parker ("Parker") in Superior Court in Maricopa County. (See Divorce Decree, 6 Appellant Johnston's Excerpts of Record ("JER") 13.) Johnston, a lawyer, represented 7 himself in the divorce proceedings. The Superior Court entered its findings of facts and 8 conclusions of law on July 19, 1995. (Id.) The court awarded the couple's ownership interest 9 in Johnston's law firm, Johnston Maynard Grant & Parker ("JMGP"), to Johnston and 10 assigned a value of $1.18 million to this community asset. (Id.) To equalize its award, the 11 court awarded Parker much of the couple's remaining property and a judgment in the amount 12 of $332,078.00, with interest at 10% per annum. (Id.) It also awarded spousal maintenance 13 to Parker in the amount of $4,000.00 per month for 24 months and $2,000.00 per month
14 thereafter. (Id.)

15 On January 22, 2001, Parker and her lawyer, Appellee Melvin Sternberg ("Sternberg")
16 filed a motion in the Superior Court to hold Johnson in contempt for nonpayment of spousal 17 support. (Pet. for Order to Show Cause Re: Contempt, attached as Exh. A. to Def.
18 Sternberg's Mot. to Dismiss, Bankr. Docket Entry ("BDE") 14.) Parker alleged that Johnston 19 had not made any spousal maintenance payments to her since October 1998 and that his 20 arrearage as of January 1, 2001 was $79,422.88. (Id.) She asked that "the Court enter an 21 Order that [Johnston] be incarcerated; that his professional law license be suspended; and his 22 drivers' [sic] license be revoked or suspended until [Johnston] purges himself of contempt 23 by immediately paying ALL sums found to be due and owing to [her]." (Id. (emphasis in 24 original); see also Joint Pretrial Statement ¶ 34, JER 22.)

25
26 ¹The Court vacated the hearing scheduled for July 14, 2004, because the parties 27 submitted memoranda thoroughly discussing the law and evidence in support of their 28 positions, and oral argument would not have aided the Court's decision. See Fed R. App. P.
34(a)(2)(C), incorporated by 28 U.S.C. § 158(b)(2).

1 On February 20, 2001, Johnston filed a response to Parker's motion for contempt and 2 also moved to modify the Superior Court's divorce decree.² (Def. Parker's Mot. to Dismiss 3 Compl. at 2, BDE 17.) The parties appeared before Superior Court Judge Karen O'Connor 4 on February 22, 2001 for a fifteen-minute review hearing. (Id.) Judge O'Connor set an 5 evidentiary hearing for April 6, 2001. (Id.) The parties appeared on that date, but the court
6 ran out of time and continued the hearing to May 17, 2001. (Id.)

7 The Superior Court denied Johnston's motion to modify on May 7, 2001. (Def.
8 Parker's Mot. to Dismiss Compl. at 2, BDE 17.) Shortly thereafter, on May 14, 2001, 9 Johnston filed a Chapter 11 petition with the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District 10 of Arizona. (Chapter 11 Petition, JER 14.) Johnston's schedules showed total liabilities of 11 $960,961.00, total assets of $359,595.00, and a gross annual income of $96,000.00 (Id.)
12 Among Johnston's liabilities were $270,000.00 in mortgage loans on a home valued at 13 $300,000.00, $110,185.00 in tax liabilities owed to the IRS, and $428,000.00 owed to Parker
14 pursuant to the divorce decree. (Id.) Johnston's assets mainly consisted of his $300,000.00 15 home, his $25,000.00 partnership interest in his new law firm, a $15,000.00 interest in two 16 timeshares, an $8,000.00 car, and $11,000.00 in household furniture, collectibles, and other 17 items. (Id.)

18 On May 17, 2001, the Superior Court proceeded as scheduled with its hearing on 19 Parker's request that Johnston be held in contempt for nonpayment of spousal maintenance.
20 (See May 17, 2001 Hr'g Tr., JER 15.) Earlier in the day, Johnston's bankruptcy attorney, 21

22 ²Johnston explains his arrearage as follows: "In November 1997, Ms. Parker and Mr.
23 Johnston entered into a stipulation providing that 80% of the distributions of JMGP were to 24 be paid directly to her. [ER 18]. Five years later, and in spite of this stipulation, Mr.
25 Johnston's divorce decree debt to Ms. Parker was still not retired because the State Court's 26 projections of the value of Mr. Johnston's interest in JMGP greatly exceeded the amount 27 actually realized. Indeed, Paula Parker only received $268,339.80 because the JMG&P 28 distributions only totaled $381,663 – almost $800,000 less than predicted by Ms. Parker's expert. Thereafter, Ms. Parker has successfully taken the position that even though she had received $268,339.80, none of these proceeds counted towards Mr. Johnston's 'spousal maintenance' obligation." (Opening Br. of Appellant at 6 (emphasis in original).)

1 Ronald J. Ellett ("Ellett"), had filed a Notice of Filing of Chapter 11 Bankruptcy in the state
2 court. (See Notice of Filing, JER 17.) The Notice stated:

3 Please take notice that Petitioner Logan T. Johnston has filed a Chapter 11 4 Bankruptcy Petition with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court on May 14, 2001.
5 Accordingly, this action is stayed except those portions that relate to § 362(b).
6 Mr. Johnston will be purposing [sic] a plan under Chapter 11 to cure any 7 arrears on pre-petition bankruptcy maintenance payments owed to Ms. Parker.

8 (Id.) The bankruptcy court found that neither the state court, Parker, nor Sternberg were 9 aware of the Notice of Chapter 11 Filing when the May 17 hearing began. Johnston v. Parker 10 (In re Johnston), 308 B.R. 469, 472 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2003).

11 The parties presented the bankruptcy court with a transcript of the May 17 hearing at 12 trial, and the transcript was admitted in evidence by stipulation. (March 26, 2003 Trial Tr.
13 at 48, JER 10.). Johnston acted as his own lawyer at the hearing. The transcript shows that 14 after roughly fifteen minutes of argument on discovery issues, Johnston informed the court 15 that he had recently filed for bankruptcy, stating: "Your Honor, could I bring one thing to the 16 Court's attention now? Simply not to appear to be blindsiding anybody, I filed for personal 17 bankruptcy on Monday, and to the extent that that [sic] has any effect on what we do here, 18 I would like you to know that now." (May 17, 2001 Hr'g Tr. at 23.)

19 Appellee Sternberg responded: "Your Honor, we – once more I was handed a copy 20 of his filing of bankruptcy. I am no bankruptcy expert by any means. I don't know if it stays 21 the proceedings or not. I have no idea." (Id. at 23.) He continued: "This is a spousal 22 maintenance proceeding, and I know spousal maintenance and attorney's fees in connection 23 with these proceedings, I believe, are not exempt from bankruptcy. Whether or not we need 24 to lift [the] stay or not is another matter." (Id. at 23-24.) Johnston responded that he was not 25 a bankruptcy expert either and that "what [his] bankruptcy attorney told [him] was that the 26 effect of the bankruptcy is to stay anything regarding the property settlement" (Id.) 27 "With respect to the spousal maintenance," Johnston said, "we are going to be putting 28 together a Chapter 11 plan that will pay all the arrearages, and it's unclear to me, you know, whether that stays anything that we would be doing today or not." (Id.)

1 Sternberg then suggested going forward with "the action," but limiting it to a 2 determination of the arrears on spousal maintenance and attorney's fees. (Id. at 23.) He 3 remarked: "Then, perhaps, we can get another hearing at some future [date] for the 4 remainder of these things." (Id. at 24.) Johnston apologized for "not knowing exactly what's 5 going on here" and responded: "I object in the abstract to anything that would contravene
6 the bankruptcy laws, but since I don't know what those are, I can't tell you what I'm objecting
7 to." (Id.) He then stated: "I don't think there's much dispute about whether I am in arrears 8 on these matters. There may be some dispute about the numbers. I don't object to those 9 numbers being established if we can do that today." (Id.)

10 As the bankruptcy court noted, "it is clear from the transcript [of the hearing] that the 11 state court judge struggled with how and whether to proceed." Johnston, 308 B.R. at 472.
12 Ultimately, the judge concluded that she should proceed with the hearing to determine 13 whether Johnston was in contempt of court for failure to comply with the divorce decree, but 14 that she would "take up the issue of sanctions at a later time when counsel has researched 15 whether or not this court has jurisdiction to issue sanctions when a bankruptcy proceeding 16 is pending." (May 17, 2001 Hr'g Tr. at 24.) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judge took 17 the motion for contempt under advisement. (Id.)

18 In a minute entry dated June 22, 2001 and filed on July 13, 2001 (the "Minute Entry 19 Order" or "Order"), the Superior Court judge found that Johnston was ordered to pay spousal 20 maintenance in the amount of $2,000.00 per month pursuant to the divorce decree; that he 21 had knowledge of the order; that he had the ability to comply with the order; and that he was 22 in arrears in the amount of $87,525.60 through April 1, 2001. (Minute Entry Order, JER 15; 23 Joint Pretrial Statement ¶ 4, JER 22.) The judge granted judgment in favor of Parker for 24 $87,525.60, found Johnston in contempt, and – though she had indicated that she would not 25 proceed further – ordered Johnston to pay the judgment by August 1, 2001. (Minute Entry 26 Order, JER 15.) Significantly, she ordered that if Johnston failed to pay the judgment by that 27
28

1 date, he would be "incarcerated in the Maricopa County Jail for an indefinite period of time
2 until the full amount of arrearages was paid in full." Id.

3 The bankruptcy court found that "all parties to the State Court litigation were 4 surprised by the Minute Entry Order." Johnston, 398 B.R. at 473. It observed that "[t]he 5 evidence . . . reflected that the Defendants had expected further proceedings before the Judge 6 would order the Debtor to pay a sum certain or face any consequences." Id. On July 16, 7 2001, Johnston's bankruptcy attorney, Ellett, faxed a letter to the state court seeking to vacate 8 the Order. The letter stated:

9 Here is the notice of filing Chpt. 11 bankruptcy. Mr. Johnston is prohibited by 10 federal bankruptcy law from transferring or encumbering any of his property.
11 On the other hand, Judge O'Connor's ruling seems to require Mr. Johnston to 12 immediately liquidate his property or else face immediate incarceration.
13 Therefore, I firmly believe that Judge O'Connor's order is a violation of the 14 automatic stay under 11 U.S.C. § 362. I can only assume that she was unaware 15 that 11 U.S.C. 1 [sic] 362 applied to this case. I hope she will immediately 16 withdraw her order. If she does not intend to do so, please let me know by 17 noon on July 17, 2001 so that I can seek relief from Chief Judge Curly.

14 (Letter from Ellett to O'Connor of 7/16/01, at 1, JER 17.) Appellee Sternberg was copied on 15 the letter. (Id.)

16 Ellett continued his efforts to vacate the Minute Entry Order the next day. On July 17 17, 2001, he faxed a letter to Sternberg requesting that Sternberg take affirmative action to 18 cure the alleged stay violation:

19 The [state court's] Minute Entry reflects that you were the attorney who 20 appeared on May 17, 2004 and sought relief . . . The Court's ruling is a stay 21 violation, and clearly so. Moreover, as counsel of record you have also 22 violated the stay, as has your client. Further, under Federal Bankruptcy Law 23 you will be deemed to be in continuing violation of the stay if you do not take 24 appropriate remedial measures to cure your violation of the stay. Unless this 25 stay violation is immediately cured, I will be filing a complaint in Judge 26 Curly's Court naming Ms. [Parker] and yourself as two of the defendants. My 27 overwhelming preference is that you and Ms. [Parker] bring yourself into 28 compliance with Federal Bankruptcy Law voluntarily. You will have until July 19, 2001, at 3:00 p.m. to take remedial measures.

25 (Letter from Ellett to Sternberg of 7/17/01, at 2, JER 17.) On July 19, after Appellees did not 26 take action, Johnston filed a petition for special action in the Arizona Court of Appeals
27 seeking a stay of the state court's Minute Entry Order. (Joint Pretrial Statement ¶ 5, JER 22.)

1 He also filed a motion for stay in the Superior Court. (Id.) The Superior Court, however, 2 "did not set a hearing until August 2, 2001, the day after Johnston was to pay the amount of 3 $87,525.60 or face incarceration." Johnston, 398 B.R. at 473.

4 The Appellees filed a response to Johnston's petition for special action and requested 5 that the petition be denied, arguing that the automatic stay did not prevent the May 17 hearing
6 from continuing or prevent the state court from entering its Order. (Joint Pretrial Statement 7 ¶ 6.) The Arizona Court of Appeals held an expedited hearing, and, on July 31, 2001, 8 granted a temporary stay of the Superior Court's Order. (Order, JER 21.) By then, Johnston 9 and his bankruptcy counsel had filed the complaint in this adversary proceeding as well as 10 an emergency motion to set aside the Minute Entry Order. Johnston, 398 B.R. at 473. On 11 July 31, 2001, the bankruptcy court held an expedited hearing, found the Minute Entry Order
12 in violation of the stay, and vacated the Order. (See Minute Entry, ER 5.)

13 Thereafter, the Appellees filed motions for reconsideration and a motion to dismiss.
14 The bankruptcy court denied the motions. In a written opinion denying Parker and 15 Sternberg's Motion to Dismiss, the bankruptcy court found that the Defendants "violated the 16 automatic stay," but noted that the factual question of willfulness remained. (Memorandum 17 Decision at 6, JER 7.) The matter then proceeded to trial. In the days leading up to the trial 18 and at trial, the bankruptcy court excluded some of the evidence that Johnston sought to 19 introduce on damages, including evidence of Parker's alleged malice, the value of Parker's 20 alleged interest in a real estate trust, Johnston's alleged emotional distress, and evidence 21 bearing on the attorneys fees incurred by Johnston in this adversary proceeding. (See 22 February 28, 2003 Hr'g Tr., JER 8; March 28, 2004 Trial Tr., JER 10; April 2, 2003 Trial Tr., 23 JER 11.) After Johnston presented his case at trial, the Appellees moved for a directed 24 verdict. (April 2, 2003 Trial Tr. at 158, JER 11.) The bankruptcy court granted the motion
25 in a written opinion issued August 8, 2003 and reversed its earlier holding that the Appellees 26 violated the stay, stating that "the Court sees no basis to hold the Defendants Parker and 27 Sternberg in violation or continuing violation of the stay." Johnston, 308 B.R. at 484.

28

1 202 B.R. 127, 128 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996). The Appellees motion was in fact a motion for 2 a judgment based on partial findings, and is governed by Rule 52(c) of the Federal Rules of 3 Civil Procedure. See id. Rule 52(c) provides:

4 If during a trial without a jury a party has been fully heard on an issue and the 5 court finds against the party on that issue, the court may enter judgment as a 6 matter of law against that party with respect to a claim or defense that cannot 7 under the controlling law be maintained or defeated without a favorable 8 finding on that issue, or the court may decline to render any judgment until the 9 close of all the evidence. Such a judgment shall be supported by findings of 10 fact and conclusions of law as required by subdivision (a) of this rule.

11 Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c). Rule 7052 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure makes Rule 12 52(c) applicable in adversary proceedings.

13 When ruling on a Rule 52(c) motion, "the court acts as both judge and jury." Regency
14 Holdings (Cayman), Inc. v. Microcap Fund, Inc. (In re Regency Holdings (Cayman), Inc.), 15 216 B.R. 371, 374 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998); Grant v. Bullock County Bd. of Educ., 895 F.
16 Supp. 1506, 1509 (M.D. Ala. 1995). The "court is within its prerogative 'to weigh the 17 evidence, resolve any conflicts in it, and decide for itself where the preponderance lies.' " 18 Von Zuckerstein v. Argonne Nat'l Lab., 984 F.2d 1467, 1475 (7th Cir. 1993) (quoting 19 Sanders v. General Serv. Admin., 707 F.2d 969, 971 (7th Cir. 1993)); see also In re Lund, 20 202 B.R. at 130 ("On a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c), the judge is the trier of fact and 21 may weigh and consider the evidence and sustain defendant's motion though plaintiff's 22 evidence establishes a prima facie case that would have precluded a directed verdict for 23 defendant in a jury case." (quotations omitted)). In reviewing a judgment entered pursuant 24 to Rule 52(c), the lower court's findings of facts are reviewed for clear error and its legal 25 conclusions are reviewed de novo. Price v. United States Navy, 39 F.3d 1011, 1021 (9th Cir.
26 1994).

27 Whether the automatic stay provisions of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) have been violated is a 28 question of law reviewed de novo. Eskanos & Adler, P.C. v. Leetien, 309 F.3d 1210, 1213 (9th Cir. 2002). On the other hand, a bankruptcy court's determination that a stay violation was willful, so as to subject the violator to an award of damages against it, is reviewed for

1 clear error. Kaiser Aluminum Corp. v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. (In re Kaiser 2 Aluminum Corp.), 303 B.R. 299, 303 (D. Del. 2003); Shaddock v. Rodalakis, 221 B.R. 573, 3 581 (D. Mass. 1997).

4 B. The Automatic Stay

5 Title 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) automatically stays a wide array of collection and 6 enforcement proceedings against the debtor and his or her property. The stay is self-7 executing and is effective upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition. 11 U.S.C. § 362(a);
8 The Minoco Group of Companies. V. First State Underwriters Agency of New England
9 Reinsurance Group (In re The Minoco Group of Companies.), 799 F.2d 517, 520 (9th Cir.
10 1986). It "is an instrument of sweeping breadth and tremendous power." Henry J. Sommer 11 & Margaret Dee McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code ¶ 5.03[1] (Matthew 12 Bender ed. 2004). The stay "is intended immediately to put the debtor and the debtor's 13 property under the protection of the bankruptcy court" and its availability "is often a 14 significant factor in a debtor's decision to commence a bankruptcy case." Id.

15 The automatic stay has three basic purposes. First, by stopping collection efforts 16 against the debtor, the stay gives the debtor time to devise a reorganization plan and " 'to be 17 relieved of the financial pressures that drove him into bankruptcy.' " Benedor Corp. v.
18 Conejo Enters. (In re Benedor Corp.), 96 F.3d 346, 351 (9th Cir. 1996) (quoting S. Rep. No.
19 95-989, at 54-55 (1978), reprinted in 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5787, 5840-41)). Second, it 20 "assures creditors that the debtor's other creditors are not racing to various courthouses to 21 pursue independent remedies to drain the debtor's assets." Dean v. Trans World Airlines, 72 22 F.3d 754, 755-56 (9th Cir. 1995); see also H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, at 340, reprinted in part in 23 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5787, 6297. Finally, it affords the bankruptcy court an opportunity to 24 harmonize the interests of both debtor and creditors while preserving the debtor's assets for 25 repayment and reorganization of his or her obligations. MacDonald v. MacDonald (In re 26 MacDonald), 755 F.2d 715, 717 (9th Cir. 1995).

1 The scope of the automatic stay is set forth in a series of overlapping provisions in § 2 362(a). The stay bars the commencement or continuation of any judicial, administrative or 3 other action against the debtor that was or could have been commenced before the 4 commencement of the bankruptcy case or to recover a claim against the debtor that arose
5 before the bankruptcy case. 11 U.S.C. 362(a). It "provides for a broad stay of litigation, lien 6 enforcement and other actions, judicial or otherwise, that are attempts to enforce or collect 7 prepetition claims." 3 Collier on Bankruptcy, supra, ¶ 362.01 (Matthew Bender 15th ed.
8 Revised 2004). "It also stays a wide range of actions that would affect or interfere with 9 property of the estate, property of the debtor or property in the custody of the estate." Id.

10 Although the reach of the automatic stay is broad, it is not without limits. Some 11 actions that would otherwise fall within the scope of the stay are excepted. Among these 12 exceptions is § 362(b)(2), which provides that the stay shall not apply to (A) the 13 "commencement or continuation of an action or proceeding" for "the establishment of 14 paternity" or "the establishment or modification of an order for alimony, maintenance, or 15 support," or (B) "collection of alimony, maintenance, or support from property that is not 16 property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2). "When this exception is applicable, seeking 17 relief from the stay is unnecessary, since the stay never comes into effect." Sommer & 18 McGarity, supra, ¶ 5.03[3].

19 Section 362(b)(2)(B) is particularly relevant here. That section exempts from the stay 20 collection of alimony, maintenance, or support from property that is "not property of the 21 estate." 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(B). In Chapter 11 cases, property of the estate is defined by 22 11 U.S.C. § 541. "[G]enerally it includes virtually all property rights and interests of 23 whatever kind that the debtor had at the time the bankruptcy case commenced." Sommer & 24 McGarity, supra, ¶ 5.03[3][a][i] (citing 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1)). Property of the estate "does 25 not generally include any property interests or income acquired by the debtor after the 26 commencement of the bankruptcy case, except to the extent that they are rents and proceeds 27 of estate property." Id. (citing 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(5)). Thus, in a Chapter 11 case, "collection 28

1 of support or alimony solely from the debtor's postpetition income or property is not stayed."

2 Id.

3 C. Enforcement of the Automatic Stay

4 Enforcement of the automatic stay is accomplished in two ways. First, "[c]ourts have 5 consistently held that legal proceedings in violation of the automatic stay are void, regardless 6 of whether the party initiating or continuing the proceedings has knowledge of the stay."
7 Sommer & McGarity, supra, ¶ 5.05[1]; see also Gruntz v. County of Los Angeles (In re 8 Gruntz), 202 F.3d 1074, 1082 (9th Cir. 2000) ("[A]ctions taken in violation of the automatic 9 stay are void."). "Although a very limited exception to this rule may exist for certain 10 postpetition transfers of real estate, in general, any court order or enforcement action 11 pursuant to a legal proceeding that is automatically stayed will be declared a nullity."
12 Sommer & McGarity, supra, ¶ 5.05[1](footnote omitted).

13 Second, "parties who violate the stay after notice of the bankruptcy case, and often 14 their counsel as well, have been subject to sanctions including damages, attorney's fees, and 15 punitive damages." Id. The automatic stay has the same effect as a court-ordered injunction.
16 Id. As a result, "any violation of the stay's provision is contempt of court." Id. (citing In the 17 Matter of Carter, 16 B.R. 481 (W.D. Mo. 1981) and Fid. Mortgage Inv. v. Camelia Bldrs., 18 Inc., 550 F.2d 47 (2d Cir. 1976)). A statutory cause of action arises when a willful violation 19 of the stay occurs and causes injury to an individual. Under 11 U.S.C. § 362(h), an 20 individual injured by any such wilful violation has a right to recover damages, including 21 costs and attorney's fees. In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, 120 B.R. 724, 738 (Bankr.
22 S.D.N.Y. 1990). An additional finding of maliciousness or bad faith warrants the imposition 23 of punitive damages. Id. "A 'willful violation' does not require a specific intent to violate 24 the automatic stay." Pinkstaff v. United States (In re Pinkstaff), 974 F.2d 113, 115 (9th Cir.
25 1992) (citation omitted). "Rather, the statute provides for damages upon a finding that the 26 defendant knew of the automatic stay and that the defendant's actions which violated the stay 27 were intentional." Id.

1 D. Collection of Alimony, Maintenance, or Support from Property That is Not 2 Property of the Estate

3 As a threshold matter, this Court must decide whether proceedings to enforce alimony 4 or support orders – like the state court contempt proceedings at issue here – are included in 5 § 362(b)(2)(B)'s exception to the automatic stay, even when those proceedings seek to collect 6 only from non-estate property. Both the bankruptcy court and the parties have assumed that 7 § 362(b)(2)(B) excepts actions to hold the debtor in contempt for failing to comply with a 8 court order so long as the actions seek to collect only from postpetition or exempt property.
9 The issue, however, is not as simple as it appears. Some debate over the breadth of the 10 exception exists.

11 The editors of Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code and Collier on 12 Bankruptcy argue that § 362(b)(2)(B)'s exception for the "collection of alimony, 13 maintenance, and support" does not extend to contempt proceedings to enforce such 14 obligations. 3 Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 362.05[2] (Matthew Bender 15th ed. Revised 2004); 15 Sommer & McGarity, supra, 5.03[3][b]. In support of their position, they draw a distinction 16 between the words "enforcement" and "collection." Id. They argue that the "collection" as 17 used in the statute means nothing more than the passive receipt of funds pursuant to a prior 18 order or judgment. Id. Although they admit that "collection" may be "interpreted to 19 encompass the continuation of a proceeding for the purposes of collecting," they argue that 20 such an interpretation was not likely intended because "other exceptions to the stay 21 specifically speak of enforcement of judgments." Sommer & McGarity, supra, 5.03[3][b] 22 (citing 11 U.S.C. 262(b)(5), now repealed).

23 Second, the editors focus on the absence of the words "enforcement" or "collection"
24 in § 362(b)(2)(B)'s companion, § 362(b)(2)(A). See 3 Collier on Bankruptcy, supra, ¶ 25 362.05[2]. That section grants an exception for the "continuation of an action or 26 proceeding," 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(A), but only for the "establishment or modification" of 27 an order for alimony, maintenance, or support, id. § 362(b)(2)(A)(ii). The editors argue that 28

1 if Congress had intended to except proceedings to collect alimony, maintenance, or support 2 orders from the automatic stay, it would have included the words "enforcement" or 3 "collection" along with the words "establishment or modification" in § 362(b)(2)(A)(ii). In 4 support of this argument, they cite Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare v. Davenport, 5 495 U.S. 552, 560 (1990), superseded by statute on other grounds, 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a). In 6 that case, the Supreme Court concluded that when Congress excepted only "the 7 commencement of or continuation of a criminal action or proceeding against the debtor" in 8 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(1), it did not mean to also except government efforts to collect criminal 9 restitution debts. Id.

10 While Collier on Bankruptcy and Collier Family Law and Bankruptcy are persuasive 11 authority for the interpretation of § 362(b)(2)(B), they are not binding. The Court has found 12 no case in the Ninth Circuit that addresses the distinction between the mere passive collection 13 of alimony, maintenance, or support and a proceeding to collect. The vast majority of cases 14 in fact assume that the commencement or continuation of actions or proceedings to collect 15 are excepted from the automatic stay, so long as those proceedings seek to collect only from 16 non-estate property. See, e.g., Buyser v. Montgomery County Domestic Relations (In re 17 Buyser), No. 99-17642DAS, 1999 WL 458965, at *1 (E.D. Pa. July 2, 1999); Vargason v.
18 Porter (In re Vargason), 260 B.R. 488, 492 (Bankr. D.N.D. 2001); In re Campbell, 185 B.R.
19 628, 630 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1995); Kearns v. Orr (In re Kearns), 168 B.R. 423, 426 (Bankr.
20 D. Kan. 1994); In re Weidenhammer, 82 B.R. 383, 385-86 (Bankr. E.D. Pa 1988); 21 Henderson v. Henderson (Ex Parte Henderson), 574 So. 2d 830, 831 (Ala. Civ. App. 1990).
22 The Court has found only one case that adopts the Collier position, but that case merely 23 quotes Collier on Bankruptcy without discussion. See Lori v. Lori (In re Lori), 241 B.R. 353,

1 355 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1999) (quoting 3 Collier on Bankruptcy, supra, ¶ 362.05[2])).⁴ The 2 Court will therefore conduct an independent analysis of § 362(b)(2)(B).

3 The Collier interpretation of § 362(b)(2)(B) stands or falls on whether the word 4 "collection" in § 363(b)(2)(B) is active or passive and whether any significance attaches to 5 Congress' decision not to use the word "enforcement" in that section or in § 363(b)(2)(A)(ii).
6 As a general rule, "exceptions to the automatic stay are read narrowly to secure the broad 7 grant of relief to the debtor." Stringer v. Huet, 847 F.2d 549, 552 (9th Cir. 1988). But as 8 always, "[a court's] duty, in matters of statutory construction, is to give effect to the intent of 9 Congress." A-Z Int'l v. Phillips, 323 F.3d 1141, 1146 (9th Cir. 2003). To this end, "[i]t is 10 elementary that the meaning of a statute must, in the first instance, be sought in the language 11 in which the act is framed, and if that is plain, . . . the sole function of the courts is to enforce 12 it according to its terms." Kaplan v. City of North Las Vegas, 323 F.3d 1226, 1231-32 (9th 13 Cir. 2003) (citation omitted) (second alteration in original). Where, as here, a statute does not 14 define a term, resort to a dictionary is permissible, United States v. Sherburne, 249 F.3d 15 1121, 1126 (9th Cir. 2001), and a court should construe the term in accordance with its 16 "ordinary, contemporary, common meaning," A-Z, Int'l, 323 F.3d at 1146 (citation omitted).
17 A court must also, if possible, give effect to every clause and word of a statute. Negonsott 18 v. Samuels, 507 U.S. 99, 106 (1993). Only if an ambiguity exists, or when an absurd 19 construction results, does this court refer to the statute's legislative history. S.E.C. v.
20 McCarthy, 322 F.3d 650, 655 (9th Cir. 2003).

21 Because the analysis of § 362(b)(2)(B) is governed by the traditional rules of statutory 22 construction, the Court begins by looking to the plain meaning of the word "collection." 23 Webster's Third New International Dictionary defines the noun "collection" as "the act of 24 collecting (as taxes by a tax collector)," specifically "the securing of payment of a check, 25

26 ⁴Another case, Tipton v. Adkins (In re Tipton), 257 B.R. 865, 875 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.
27 2000), cites Lori for the proposition that § 362(b)(2)(B) does not extend to the continuation 28 or commencement of a proceeding to enforce an alimony order, but includes no substantive discussion of the statute.

1 bond, coupon, or other credit instrument by presentation to the buyer." Webster's Third New 2 Int'l Dictionary 444 (Mirriam-Webster ed. 1986) (emphasis added). To "collect," in turn, 3 means "to claim and receive in payment or fair recompense" or "to present as due and receive 4 payment for." Id. (emphasis added). In contrast to the definition of "collection" adopted by 5 the editors of Collier on Bankruptcy and Collier Family Law and Bankruptcy, these 6 definitions imply that collection is an active, not merely a passive undertaking. While 7 collection may involve the mere passive receipt of something, this is not the "ordinary, 8 contemporary, common meaning of the word." A-Z, Int'l, 323 F.3d at 1146 (citation 9 omitted). The word implies a claim for payment followed by receipt of payment.

10 The editors of Collier on Bankruptcy and Collier Family Law and Bankruptcy 11 acknowledge that "collection" may be interpreted to encompass a proceeding to collect, but 12 contend that such an interpretation is unlikely because Congress spoke of "enforcement" of 13 judgments in other exceptions to the stay and could have used that same language in § 14 262(b)(2)(B). See Sommer & McGarity, supra, 5.03[3][b]. In making this argument, they 15 are presumably relying on the general rule of statutory construction that teaches that courts 16 should not construe different terms within the same statute to embody the same meaning.
17 See Rusello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23 (1983). But that canon "[does not] mean that 18 there cannot be overlap between words in a statute, such that in some cases, both apply."
19 United States v. Hill, 79 F.3d 1477, 1482-83 (6th Cir. 1996). Given that the primary 20 definition of "collection" is active, the Court finds it unlikely that Congress would choose 21 the less common, passive definition without making its choice explicit. Further, to the extent 22 the editors rely on Davenport's discussion of § 362(b)(1) for their argument that "collection" 23 as used in § 362(b)(2) is passive, their reliance is misplaced. In Davenport, 495 U.S. at 560, 24 the Court contrasted § 362(b)(1) with § 362(b)(2) and found that the absence of a separate 25 exception for "collection" in § 362(b)(1) indicated that § 362(b)(1) did not exempt efforts to 26 collect criminal restitution debts from the automatic stay. There is no such absence here – 27 § 362(b)(2) contains a specific exception for collection.

28

1 The Court finds that the plain meaning of the term "collection" in § 262(b)(2)(B) 2 encompasses a proceeding to collect, and that resort to the statute's legislative history is not 3 warranted. The fact that so many cases simply assume that "collection" means a proceeding 4 to collect supports the Court's construction. As the Ninth Circuit has stated, "lack of 5 interpretative caselaw may well mean that other courts and litigants have not doubted the 6 plain meaning of the statute." Stringer, 847 F.2d at 551 n.2. And the assumption about the 7 meaning of the term "collection" is not just one to which bankruptcy courts or district courts 8 adhere. Even the Ninth Circuit has indicated that "collection" includes a proceeding to 9 collect. See Stringer, 847 F.2d at 552 ("We find the exemption of § 362(b)(2) for 'collection' 10 of child support applies only to proceedings to collect child support that has been awarded 11 by an order entered prior to the filing of the petition [and not to modification of support 12 order]." (first and second emphasis added; third alteration in original)). Other courts of 13 appeals have made the same assumption. See Amonte v. Amonte, 17 Mass. App. 621, 625, 14 461 N.E.2d 826, 830 (Mass. 1984) ("[W]e can only conclude that the word 'collection' in § 15 362(b)(2) was expressly intended to apply to proceedings which have culminated in the entry 16 of final judgment or order for alimony, or support prior to the filing of a petition under the 17 Act." (first, second, and third emphasis added; fourth alteration in original)). So long as 18 contempt proceedings collect only from non-estate property, they are within § 362(b)(2)(B) 19 exception to the automatic stay.

20 Even if the Court were to rely on § 362(b)(2)'s legislative history, the result would be 21 the same. "The exception in 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2) strikes a balance between the goals of 22 protecting the bankruptcy estate and protecting the spouse and children of the debtor." 23 Carver v. Carver, 954 F.3d 1573 (11th Cir. 1992). The Senate and House Reports state the 24 following about the goals of the § 362(b)(2):

25 The automatic stay is one means of protecting the debtor's discharge.
26 Alimony, maintenance, and support obligations are excepted from discharge.
27 Staying collection of [alimony, maintenance, and support], when not to the 28 detriment of other creditors (because the collection effort is against property that is not property of the estate), does not further [the goal of protecting the

1 debtor's discharge]. Moreover, it could lead to hardship on the part of the 2 protected spouse or children.

3 H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 342-43 (1977), reprinted in 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N.
4 5963, 6299; S. Rep. No. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 51 (1978), reprinted in 1978
5 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5787, 5837. Significantly, this passage speaks of "collection" in terms of 6 "collection effort[s]." Id. This again implies that "collection" as used in § 362(b)(2)(B) 7 encompasses active collection efforts, not merely the passive receipt of funds from a wage
8 attachment or garnishment entered pursuant to a prior order. The plain meaning of the word 9 "collection" in § 362(b)(2)(B) as well as the legislative history of that section support the 10 conclusion that "collection" as used in the statute extends to active proceedings to enforce 11 alimony, maintenance, and support obligations.

12 E. Did a Violation of the Stay Occur?

13 Having found that § 362(b)(2)(B) does provide an exception to the stay for 14 proceedings to collect alimony, maintenance, or support so long as the collection efforts are 15 made against property that is not property of the estate, the Court now turns to the question 16 of whether a willful stay violation occurred during the state court contempt proceedings, 17 keeping in mind that it reviews findings of fact of the bankruptcy court for clear error and 18 conclusions of law de novo.

19 1. The State Court's Minute Entry Order

20 Appellee Sternberg argues that automatic stay is "simply inapplicable to collection 21 activities related to spousal maintenance" and that the Court "may affirm [the bankruptcy 22 court] solely on the legal basis that the domestic relations state court action was clearly 23 within the § 362(b) statutory exception to the automatic stay[.]" (Appellee Sternberg's 24 Opening Br. at 8-9.) This is simply incorrect. As the discussion in Sections II(B) and (C) 25 above shows, § 362(b)(2)(B) excepts proceedings to collect of alimony, maintenance, or 26 support from the automatic stay, but only when the collection is against property that is not 27 property of the estate. The bankruptcy court found that the evidence demonstrated that 28 Johnston "could not pay the sum certain set forth in the Minute Entry Order – even with

1 estate property." Johnston, 308 B.R. at 478. Neither Parker nor Sternberg has challenged 2 this factual finding. Because the state court's Minute Entry Order "required the immediate 3 liquidation of estate property," the bankruptcy court properly held that the Order violated the 4 automatic stay. Id.

5 As the bankruptcy court noted, "[i]f the State Court had qualified its Order to reflect 6 only the amount of arrearages, or if the State Court had been advised of what constituted non-7 estate property, so that the Minute Entry Order could be tailored only to the collection of the 8 arrearages from non-estate property, then the State Court would have been acting within the 9 § 362(b)(2)(B) exception to the automatic stay." Johnston, 308 B.R. at 480. The Minute 10 Entry Order in this case, however, "required that [Johnston] immediately satisfy a large 11 judgment or face incarceration; [sic] all without the State Court focusing on the non-estate 12 property to pay such a Judgment or requesting the bankruptcy court's prior determination of 13 whether the automatic stay applied to the property from which the Judgment would have 14 been satisfied." Id. Because the Minute Entry Order was overly broad and did not consider 15 whether Johnston could pay the judgment from non-estate property, it violated the stay.

16 The bankruptcy court in In re Sutton, 250 B.R. 771 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2000) faced a 17 similar situation. The debtor in that case was a party in a divorce proceeding in Dade 18 County, Florida. Id. at 774. The defendant, Rodriguez, was appointed guardian ad litem for 19 the parties' minor child, and the state court ultimately entered an order requiring the debtor 20 to pay Rodriguez's reasonable attorney's fees and costs. Id. Before the debtor filed for 21 bankruptcy, Rodriguez filed a motion to compel payment. Id. Nine days before the hearing 22 on the motion, the debtor filed a Chapter 7 petition. Id. Although Rodriguez had knowledge 23 of the bankruptcy case, she proceeded with the hearing. Id. The state court judge granted 24 the motion and entered an order compelling the debtor "to make payment of fees to the 25 appointed guardian, Racquel Rodriguez, within 20 days." Id. Though Rodriguez argued that 26 the state court was proceeding under § 262(b)(2)(B)'s exception to the automatic stay, the 27 bankruptcy court found that the order violated the stay because it, among other things,

28

1 "compel[led] the Debtor to pay the fees within 20 days without limiting the source of the 2 payment to monies which are not property of the bankruptcy estate." Id. at 775.

3 In the proceedings below, the Appellees relied on In re Bezoza, 271 B.R. 46 (Bankr.
4 S.D.N.Y. 2002) for the proposition that the Superior Court proceeded properly. The debtor
5 in that case and his wife were divorced in 1999 in New Jersey, and the debtor failed to pay 6 support and related obligations. Id. at 48. The debtor domesticated the judgment in New 7 York, and began proceedings in that state to enforce it. Id. Under New York law, a state 8 court may commit a delinquent support debtor to jail upon a finding by the court that the 9 respondent has willfully failed to obey any lawful order of support. Id. at 51-52. Willfulness
10 requires proof of the ability to pay and the failure to do so. Id. at 52. The state court 11 appointed a hearing examiner, who took evidence of the debtor's assets, his operations 12 through a professional corporation and other entities, his lifestyle, and his transfers to and 13 from third parties, including his father and girlfriend. Id. at 48-50. The examiner found that 14 the debtor willfully failed to pay support and made a non-binding recommendation that the 15 debtor serve six months in prison, but also recommended that he be released from custody 16 upon payment of $200,000 and permitted to serve the balance of his sentence on weekends.
17 Id. at 51. The state court later accepted the order and turned the debtor over to the custody 18 of the New York City Department of Corrections. Id.

19 On appeal, the debtor was released but failed to meet certain conditions and was 20 reincarcerated. Id. at 50-51. While in jail, he filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition and a 21 motion seeking relief from the bankruptcy court based on the premise that his continuing 22 confinement violated the automatic stay. Id. at 48. The bankruptcy court noted that given 23 the broad ruling from the state court, it was "tempting to infer" that the ex-wife was pursuing 24 property of the estate. Id. at 51. The court, however, concluded that the debtor's continuing 25 confinement did not violate the automatic stay because the hearing examiner's conclusion that 26 the debtor had the ability to pay support was not based on the availability of resources that, 27 after the bankruptcy petition was filed, became property of the estate. Id. at 52. But in that 28

1 case, the bankruptcy court had a detailed prepetition record reflecting the debtor's assets and 2 determined that the non-estate assets were so substantial that no coercive effect was placed 3 on the debtor to use estate assets to pay the judgment. Id. at 53. Unlike the court in In re 4 Bezoza, the bankruptcy court here had no such record to review from the state court.
5 Moreover, the court found that Johnston could not pay the judgment from even from estate
6 property. Given the breadth of the State Court's Minute Entry, the bankruptcy court correctly 7 concluded that the Superior Court's Minute Entry Order violated the stay.

8 2. The Appellees' Actions

9 a. Before Entry of the Minute Entry Order

10 Finding that the state court's Minute Entry Order violated the automatic stay is 11 necessary but not sufficient to find Parker and Sternberg liable for the stay violation under 12 11 U.S.C. § 362(h). A statutory cause of action arises under § 362(h) only when a 13 willful violation of the automatic stay occurs. 11 U.S.C. § 362(h). The test for determining 14 whether a violation of the automatic stay is willful is: (1) whether the appellees knew of the 15 stay and (2) whether the violation of the stay was intentional. Goichman v. Bloom (In re 16 Bloom), 875 F.2d 224, 227 (9th Cir. 1989). "Knowledge of the bankruptcy filing is the legal 17 equivalent of knowledge of the automatic stay under § 362." Havelock v. Taxel (In re Pace), 18 159 B.R. 890, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993), vacated in part on other grounds, In re Pace, 56 F.3d 19 1170 (9th Cir. 1995). "Intentional" does not mean a specific subjective intent to violate the 20 stay. Pinkstaff, 974 F.2d at 115. It is irrelevant whether the party believed in good faith that 21 it had a right to the property at issue. Bloom, 875 F.2d at 227; Pace, 159 B.R. at 901. "Not 22 even a good faith mistake of law or a legitimate dispute as to legal rights relieve a willful 23 violator of the consequences of his act." Ramirez v. Fuselier (In re Ramirez), 183 B.R. 583, 24 589 (9th Cir. BAP 1995) (quotation omitted)

25 The bankruptcy court found that the state court acted on its own in issuing the Minute
26 Entry Order Johnston, 308 B.R. at 478. It concluded that "all parties to [the contempt 27 proceedings] were surprised by the scope of the Order." Id. The state court had promised 28

1 and the parties "had anticipated that further proceedings would be required before the State
2 Court determined what action, if any, should be taken concerning the Debtor's nonpayment
3 of support." Id. Instead, the bankruptcy court found, "the State Court, on its own, concluded 4 that the Debtor was in contempt, that he must pay $87,525.60 by August 1, 2001, or the 5 Debtor would be incarcerated for an indefinite period of time." Id. Johnston challenges
6 these findings, alleging that Sternberg requested that the state court order Johnston's 7 incarceration at the May 17 hearing even after he learned of Johnston's bankruptcy filing.
8 (Opening Br. of Appellant at 19.)

9 The Court equates the bankruptcy court's finding that the state court acted on its own 10 with a finding that there was no willful violation of the automatic stay at that point in time 11 by the Appellees. Willfulness is a question of fact reviewed for clear error. Kaiser 12 Aluminum Corp., 303 B.R. at 303; Shaddock v. Rodalakis, 221 B.R. at 581. Review under 13 the clearly erroneous standard is significantly deferential, requiring "a definite and firm 14 conviction that a mistake has been committed." Concrete Pipe & Prods. v. Constr. Laborers 15 Pension Trust, 532 U.S. 234, 242 (2001). If the district court's account of the evidence is 16 plausible in light of the record viewed in its entirety, the court of appeals may not reverse it 17 even though convinced that had it been sitting as a trier of fact, it would have weighed the 18 evidence differently. Phoenix Eng'g & Supply, Inc. v. Universal Elec. Co., 104 F.3d 1137, 19 1141 (9th Cir. 1997). Thus, "[w]here there are two permissible views of the evidence, the 20 factfinder's choice between them cannot be clearly erroneous." United States v. Elliot, 322 21 F.3d 710, 714 (9th Cir. 2003).

22 There is sufficient evidence to support the bankruptcy court's conclusion that the state 23 court acted on its own in issuing the Order. The transcript of the May 17 hearing shows that 24 after learning of Johnston's bankruptcy filing at the May 17, 2001 hearing, Sternberg 25 suggested limiting the hearing to a determination of whether Johnston failed to comply with 26 the support order and to a determination of the amount of arrears, reserving any remaining 27 issues for a future date. The state court judge agreed, and concluded that she should proceed 28

1 with the hearing to determine whether Johnston failed to comply, but that the issue of 2 sanctions would not be taken up until the question of whether the issue the automatic stay 3 applied to the collection of unpaid support obligations could be clarified. Although 4 Sternberg later mentioned incarceration while cross-examining Johnston on his intent to pay
5 maintenance,⁵ the remark appears to have been made in passing and Sternberg later reiterated 6 that "the only issue[s] before the Court are whether [Johnston has] complied with the court
7 order[.]" (Tr. of May 17, 2001 Hr'g at 79.) As the Ninth Circuit has said, "[t]o be clearly 8 erroneous, a decision must strike us as more than just maybe or probably wrong; it must . .
9 . strike us as wrong with the force of a five-week-old unrefrigerated dead fish." Hayes v.
10 Woodford, 301 F.3d 1054, 1067 n.8 (9th Cir. 2002) That is not the case here.

11 b. After the Entry of the Minute Entry Order

12 Johnston argues that even if the state court issued the Minute Entry Order on its own, 13 Parker and Sternberg must still be held responsible for a willful violation of the automatic 14 stay under § 362(h) because they took no affirmative action to vacate the Order once they 15 were notified by Johnston's counsel that it violated the stay and because they actually 16 opposed Johnston's requests for a stay of the Order in the Arizona Court of Appeals. The 17 Court finds the rationale of the Ninth Circuit's decision in Eskanos & Adler, P.C. v. Leetien, 18 309 F.3d 1210 (9th Cir. 2002) controlling here and concludes that the bankruptcy court erred
19 in finding that the Appellees were "not in continuing violation of the automatic stay."
20 Johnston, 308 B.R. at 484.

21 Before discussing Eskanos's holding and its applicability to this case, a brief 22 discussion of the facts of that case is necessary. The debtor in Eskanos filed a voluntary 23 Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition on August 18, 2000. Eskanos, 309 F.3d at 1213. He notified 24 one of his creditors, First Select, Inc. ("First Select"), of the filing by first class mail on

26 ⁵Sternberg asked: "Even after receiving [the contempt petition], you have not paid 27 [Parker] one penny; correct? . . . And so would it be a fair statement to say that, unless Judge 28 O'Connor shows you the dwellings in the county jail, that you will never pay her anything short of being incarcerated. Isn't that a fair statement?" (Tr. of May 17, 2001 Hr'g at 77.)

1 August 23, 2000. Id. On August 28, First Select's legal counsel and collection agent, 2 Eskanos & Adler P.C. ("Eskanos"), filed a collection action on behalf of First Select in 3 California state court. Id. The debtor, Leetien, received a summons for this action on 4 September 5, 2000. Id. The next day, Leetien's counsel made several attempts to speak by 5 telephone with an attorney at Eskanos, but no lawyer at the firm would speak to him. Id.
6 Ultimately, Leetien's counsel managed to leave a message of Leetien's pending bankruptcy 7 with a legal assistant. Id. He also notified Eskanos of the bankruptcy by fax and requested 8 that Eskanos dismiss the state action or place it on the state's stay calendar by September 20, 9 2000. Id. Despite this written demand, Eskanos did not take affirmative action to stay or 10 dismiss the collection action until September 29, 2000. Id.

11 The bankruptcy court found that Eskanos willfully violated the automatic stay. Id.
12 It concluded that sanctions were appropriate under § 362(h) because Eskanos knew of the 13 bankruptcy filing on September 6, 2000 but did not discontinue the collection action until 14 September 29, 2000. Id. In upholding the bankruptcy court's determination, the Ninth 15 Circuit held that the Bankruptcy Code imposes an affirmative duty on the part of creditors 16 to "dismiss or stay" postpetition collection actions filed in non-bankruptcy fora against the 17 debtor. Id. at 1214 (emphasis added). The Court rested its holding on the plain language of 18 the automatic stay statute, 11 U.S.C. § 362(a). Section 362(a) prohibits "the commencement 19 or continuation . . . of a judicial, administrative, or other action or proceeding against the 20 debtor that was or could have been commenced before the commencement of [the bankruptcy 21 case], or to recover a claim against the debtor that arose before the commencement of [the 22 bankruptcy]." Id. The Court found that "it contradicts the plain meaning of the statute to 23 suggest that the § 362(a)(1) stay against the continuation of judicial actions does not prohibit 24 the maintenance of an active collection claim or the unjustified delay in the [stay or] 25 dismissal of such." Id.

26 Eskanos argued that § 362(a)(1)'s prohibition against "continuation" should be read 27 narrowly to encompass only conduct that goes beyond maintaining an active claim and that 28

1 additional efforts in prosecuting the claim should be required. Id. The Ninth Circuit rejected
2 these contentions. It found that "[t]he maintenance of an active collection action alone 3 adequately satisfies the statutory prohibition against 'continuation' of judicial actions." Id.
4 at 1215. "Active state filings" (i.e., collection actions that are not stayed or dismissed), the 5 Court noted, "exist as more than placeholders – the risk of default judgment looms 6 throughout" and counsel must be engaged to defend against such a judgment Id. at 1214.
7 Further, the Court noted that such filings threaten the proper execution of bankruptcy 8 proceedings by exposing the debtor's estate to multiple collection actions, undermining the 9 debtor's ability to reorganize her financial affairs, and jeopardizing creditors as a class with 10 the possibility that one creditor will obtain payment to the detriment of all others. Id.

11 The Ninth Circuit's holding in Eskanos is consistent with established precedent in 12 other jurisdictions. Based on the language of § 362(a)(1), many courts have emphasized the 13 obligation of creditors to take affirmative action to terminate or undo any action that violates 14 the automatic stay. See, e.g., Patton v. Shade, 263 B.R. 861 (C.D. Ill. 2001); Utah State
15 Credit Union v. Skinner (In re Skinner), 90 B.R. 470, 480 (D. Utah 1988); In re McCall-
16 Pruitt, 281 B.R. 910, 911-912 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2002); In re Briskey, 258 B.R. 473, 476
17 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2001); Rainwater v. Alabama (In re Rainwater), 233 B.R. 126, 156
18 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1999); vacated on other grounds, 254 B.R. 273 (N.D. Ala. 2000); Kirk v.
19 Shawmut Bank (In re Kirk), 199 B.R. 70, 72 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996); Connecticut Pizza, Inc.
20 v. Bell Atlantic-Washington, D.C., Inc. (In re Connecticut Pizza, Inc.), 193 B.R. 217, 228
21 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996); James v. Draper (In re James), 112 B.R. 687, 700 (Bankr. E.D. Pa.
22 1990), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 120 B.R. 802 (E.D. Pa. 1990), judgment 23 rev'd on other grounds, 940 F.2d 46 (3d Cir. 1991); Clemmons v. United Student Aid Funds, 24 Inc. (Matter of Clemmons), 107 B.R. 488, 490 (Bankr. D. Del. 1989); Adams v. Philadelphia
25 Hous. Auth. (In re Adams), 94 B.R. 838, 851 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989).

26 The responsibility is placed on the creditor and not on the debtor because to place the 27 burden on the debtor to undo the violation " 'would subject the debtor to the financial 28

1 pressures the automatic stay was designed to temporarily abate.' " Ledford v. Tiedge (In the 2 Matter of Sams), 106 B.R. 485, 490 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1989) (quoting In re Miller, 22 B.R.
3 479, 481 (D. Md. 1982). "One of [the] purposes of [the automatic stay] is to protect the 4 debtor from having to convince a state court judge that the state court matter should not 5 proceed." In re Sutton, 250 B.R. at 774 (citing In re Weisberg, 218 B.R. 740, 752 (Bankr.
6 E.D. Pa. 1998)). Though "state court judges generally refrain from proceeding once they are 7 made aware of a bankruptcy filing, the burden is on the creditor not to seek relief against a 8 debtor in violation of the stay." Id. As the bankruptcy court in Elder v. City of Thomasville 9 (In re Elder), 12 B.R. 491 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1981) pointed out: "The creditor sets in motion 10 the process. The creditor is very much in the driver's seat and very much controls what is 11 done thereafter if it chooses. If the continuation is to be stayed, it (the creditor) cannot 12 choose to do nothing and pass the buck to the debtor."

13 In its memorandum decision granting the Appellees' Rule 52(c) motion, the bankruptcy
14 court found that the Appellees had no affirmative obligation to stay or vacate the Minute
15 Entry Order and sought to distinguish Eskanos on several grounds. First, the bankruptcy 16 court pointed out that Eskanos involved the commencement of a postpetition action while 17 this case involves a prepetition action. Johnston, 308 B.R. at 483. This distinction is not 18 significant. Title 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) specifically stays "the commencement or continuation 19 . . . of a judicial . . . proceeding against the debtor" (emphasis added). The continuation of 20 a judicial action in violation of the stay is as disruptive to a bankruptcy proceeding as the 21 commencement of one. Courts have "overwhelmingly and consistently held" that creditors 22 have an affirmative obligation "to halt or reverse any pending State Court actions or other 23 collection efforts [in violation of § 362(a)] commenced prior to the filing of a bankruptcy 24 petition, including garnishment of wages, repossession of an automobile, foreclosure of a 25 mortgage or a judgement lien and, thereby, maintain, or restore, the status quo as it existed
26 at the time of the filing of the bankruptcy petition." In re McCall-Pruitt, 281 B.R. 910, 911
27 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (emphasis added). The fact that Appellees filed their motion for contempt 28

1 before Johnston filed his Chapter 11 petition does not change the nature of their obligation.
2 See Sutton, 250 B.R. at 774 ("the fact that the state court hearing was scheduled before the 3 bankruptcy petition was filed is irrelevant").

4 Second, the bankruptcy court sought to distinguish Eskanos by stating that the 5 decision should be confined to "a specific type of proceeding, a 'collection action,'" implying 6 that the Appellees' state court action was not a collection action. In re Johnston, 308 B.R.
7 at 483. Again, this distinction is unpersuasive. The state court action was a collection action.
8 Appellees tacitly admit as much by asserting that they and the state court were proceeding
9 within § 362(b)(2)(B)'s exception for the "collection of alimony, maintenance or support 10 from property that is not property of the estate" (emphasis added). The bankruptcy court's 11 apparent conclusion that the state court proceeding was not an attempt to collect runs 12 contrary to the plain language of § 362(a) which includes multiple and broad prohibitions
13 against collection activities. Section 362(a)(6), for instance, provides that a filed petition 14 operates as a stay "of any act to collect, assess, or recover a claim against the debtor that 15 arose before the commencement of this case under this title." Such a narrow view of 16 "collection" activity on the part of the bankruptcy court is inconsistent with the Ninth 17 Circuit's pronouncement that "[t]he scope of protections embodied in the automatic stay is 18 quite broad, and serves as one of the most important protections in bankruptcy law."
19 Eskanos, 309 F.3d at 1214.

20 Third, the bankruptcy court suggested that Parker and Sternberg should not be subject 21 to the same rules as the defendant in Eskanos because of "separate policy issues to provide 22 and protect for the family[.]" Johnston, 308 B.R. at 484. In support of its argument, the 23 bankruptcy court cited § 362(b)(2)'s exceptions to the automatic stay and the fact that 24 alimony and maintenance are nondischargeable debts under 11 U.S.C. § 523. This argument 25 fails for three reasons. First, exceptions to the automatic stay – even those relating to 26 alimony, support, and maintenance – are construed "narrowly to secure the broad grant of 27 relief to the debtor. Stringer, 847 F.3d at 552. Section 362 expresses a policy preference in 28

1 favor of the debtor and "Congress clearly intended the automatic stay to be quite broad." Id.; 2 see also H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 340 (1977), reprinted in 1978
3 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5963, 6296-97. Second, according to the bankruptcy court's own analysis, the 4 state court's Minute Entry Order – which the Appellees defended in the Arizona Court of 5 Appeals – went well beyond the scope of § 362(b)(2)(B)'s exception and violated the 6 automatic stay. Finally, "dischargeability and relief from the stay are entirely different 7 concepts." In re Weisberg, 218 B.R. at 752. "[T]he stay prevents all actions against the 8 debtor from going forward, even those in pursuit of nondischargeable obligations not 9 squarely within the scope of § 362(b)." Id. To the extent Appellees pursued debts outside 10 the scope of § 362(b)(2) by defending the Minute Entry Order, they are subject to the same 11 strictures as any other creditor.

12 Fourth, the bankruptcy court placed significant emphasis on the fact that the Appellees 13 "took no affirmative action to execute on or control bankruptcy estate or non-estate assets to 14 collect on the obligation." Johnston, 308 B.R. at 484. The Ninth Circuit rejected a similar 15 argument in Eskanos. In that case, the defendant argued that it had no duty to dismiss or stay 16 its state court collection action (which violated the automatic stay) because § 362(a)'s 17 prohibition against "continuation" should be construed narrowly to encompass only conduct 18 that goes beyond maintaining an active claim. Eskanos, 309 F.3d at 1214. The Ninth Circuit 19 disagreed, finding that maintenance of an active claim by itself violates the automatic stay 20 and triggers the duty to cure. Id. Here, the Appellees did more than just "maintain" the 21 overly broad Minute Entry Order – they actively defended it in the Arizona Court of Appeals.
22 The Superior Court's Minute Entry Order required Johnston to pay $87,526.60 by August 1, 23 2001, on pain of incarceration. The fact that the Appellees "did not seek to enforce [the] 24 Minute Entry Order by executing upon or taking control of estate or non-estate property," 25 Johnston, 308 B.R. at 484, is of no consequence.

26 Fifth, the bankruptcy court pointed out that the Appellees' brief in the Arizona Court 27 of Appeals "was appropriately researched and the arguments presented were not frivolous." 28

1 In re Johnston, 308 B.R. at 473. As mentioned above, a willful violation of the automatic
2 stay does not require a specific subjective intent to violate the stay. Knupfer v. Lindblade 3 (In re Dyer), 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003). Rather, the creditor need only know of 4 the bankruptcy filing and act intentionally rather than inadvertently. Good faith is not a 5 defense. Ramirez, 183 B.R. at 589. In Pinkstaff, 974 F.2d at 115, the Internal Revenue 6 Service ("IRS") argued that its actions were based on a good faith belief that it was entitled 7 to repayment and thus were not a violation of the automatic stay. The Ninth Circuit expressly 8 rejected the IRS's contention and found a willful stay violation, stating: "Whether a party 9 believes in good faith that it had a right to [collect] is not relevant to whether the act was 10 'willful' or whether compensation must be awarded." Id. at 114. The Appellees were 11 proceeding at their own risk in the Arizona Court of Appeals and their good faith belief that 12 the Minute Entry Order was within an exception to the stay is irrelevant – "a creditor takes 13 a calculated risk when it undertakes to make its own determination of what the stay means 14 and fails to obtain clarification from the bankruptcy court to determine whether its actions 15 will violate the automatic stay." Rainwater, 233 B.R. at 156 vacated on other grounds, 254
16 B.R. 273 (citing, inter alia, In re Gray, 97 B.R. 930, 936 (N.D. Ill. 1989)).

17 Finally, the bankruptcy court concluded that applying Eskanos to creditors continuing 18 prepetition actions in violation of the automatic stay would require creditors to dismiss those 19 actions and that such a result could not have been intended because 11 U.S.C. § 108(c) 20 contemplates that prepetition actions will remain pending until the bankruptcy court is able 21 to rule on a motion to vacate the stay. The court has misread Eskanos. Eskanos does not 22 require dismissal of actions in violation of the stay, but rather discontinuation. It defines 23 discontinuation as either a dismissal or stay of proceedings. Eskanos, at 1214 ("A party 24 violating the automatic stay, though continuing a collection action in a non-bankruptcy 25 forum, must automatically dismiss or stay such proceeding or risk possible sanctions for 26 willful violations pursuant to § 362(h)" (emphasis added)). In this case, the Appellees were 27 required to take affirmative action to stay or vacate the state court's overbroad Minute Entry 28

1 Order. Johnston's bankruptcy counsel notified Sternberg of the stay violation on July 17, 2 2001, yet Appellees took not action to vacate the order and in fact opposed Johnston's request
3 to stay the Order in the Arizona Court of Appeals.⁶ The Appellees had an obligation to 4 remedy the violation and their failure to do so exposes them to sanctions for a willful
5 violation under § 362(h). The bankruptcy court's decision is reversed on this point.

6 F. Remand

7 If a judgment on partial findings is reversed on appeal, the matter ordinarily will be 8 returned to the trial court for further proceedings. 9 Moore's Federal Practice, § 52.53
9 (Matthew Bender 3d ed. 2003). In this case, remand is necessary because the Appellees'
10 have not yet presented their defense and, at least on appeal, have argued that Johnston is 11 barred by waiver and judicial estoppel from invoking the benefits of the automatic stay. The 12 bankruptcy court has made no findings on the legal or factual merits of these defenses, and 13 the Court leaves the issues of waiver and estoppel to the bankruptcy court assuming that the 14 Appellees have properly raised those defenses below. Further, should the bankruptcy court 15 find that no defenses are applicable, then the issue of damages must also be resolved below.

16 On remand, the trial court "may hear any evidence that was not heard before the 17 judgment on partial findings was entered." 9 Moore's Federal Practice, supra, § 52.53. "[I]t 18 is not necessary to repeat the evidence that was heard before the judgment, although the party 19 against whom the judgment was entered may supplement the evidence already supplied with 20 any evidence that would have been admissible at the first trial." Id. That is, "the trial court 21 may proceed with the case as if judgment had not been entered." Id.

24 ⁶To the extent that the bankruptcy court relied on its finding that Sternberg was out
25 of town from the time he learned of the July 13, 2001 Minute Entry Order until the July 31 26 hearing in the bankruptcy court, that finding is clearly erroneous. Sternberg admitted that he 27 was in town and working on the state court case on July 19, 2001 (.5 hours), July 20, 2001
28 (1.5 hours), and again on July 23, 2001 (2 hours). (March 26, 2003 Trial Tr. at 55-57.)
Sternberg also testified that by July 20, 2001, he had received Johnston's request for a stay of the Minute Entry Order that had been filed in the Arizona Court of Appeals. (Id. at 55.)

1 II. The Evidentiary Rulings

2 In addition to challenging the bankruptcy court's finding of nonliability, Appellant has 3 also challenged a number of evidentiary rulings that the bankruptcy court made concerning 4 damages. These rulings are not yet ripe for review. To reverse on the basis of an evidentiary 5 ruling – as Johnston urges the Court to do – the Court must conclude not only that the 6 bankruptcy court abused its discretion, but also that the error was prejudicial. McEuin v.
7 Crown Equip. Corp., 328 F.3d 1028, 1032 (9th Cir. 2003). Prejudice means that, more 8 probable than not, the lower court's error tainted the verdict or decision. Id. In this case, the 9 Appellees have not yet presented their defenses, and there has been no verdict or decision on 10 damages. Although the bankruptcy court made a few offhanded comments concerning 11 damages, the court granted the Appellees' motion for a directed verdict solely on the basis 12 of liability. Without findings of fact or conclusions of law on the Appellees' defenses or on 13 Johnston's damages, the Court cannot properly review the challenged evidentiary rulings.
14 The Court wishes to make clear that it is not resolving or expressing an opinion on the 15 evidentiary issues raised by Johnston on appeal, but assumes that the bankruptcy court will 16 allow Johnston to re-offer his evidence on damages and will rule on the admissibility of the 17 evidence anew should it eventually reach the issue of damages.

18 Accordingly,
