

Please join the Federal Bar Association, Phoenix Chapter for:

“Are you talkin’ to me?”
Just who are those “people” in the Tenth Amendment?

Faculty:

Robert J. McWhirter

Certified Specialist in Criminal Law & Supervising Attorney, ASU Alumni Law Group

“We the People” are the first words in the Constitution. The Tenth Amendment, the last of the Bill of Rights, also ends in “the people.” But who gets to be “the People”? In 1789, women, Blacks, Native Americans, Catholics, and the poor did not count. This presentation traces American slavery, hypocrisy, Federalism, and the struggle for freedom.

Robert J. McWhirter is a nationally and internationally known speaker and author on trial advocacy, immigration law, and the history of the Bill of Rights. His most recent book, Bills, Quills, and Stills: A History of the Bill of Rights, was published by the American Bar Association in 2014.
